

Eileen Anderson's Sound Conditioning Screening Form

Please watch the movie about the sound sensitive dog project.

To determine whether your dog is a good candidate for acoustical conditioning services, I need to know what types of sounds your dog is afraid of. Also, we need to be sure it is the sounds themselves that are scary, and not what they predict. So, for instance, I don't include doorbells or knocking because these usually get dogs excited because they predict strangers at the door, not because the noises themselves are scary.

- Fear of digital beeps, chirps, and whistles is easiest to treat with acoustical conditioning.
- Fear of some kinds of engines and other miscellaneous household noises can sometimes be treated. Gunshots are possible, but we would need to discuss.
- Fear of thunder or fireworks can't be treated with acoustical conditioning because of the chaotic nature of those sounds and the fact that they can't be replicated on speakers.

Owner's name _____ Dog's name _____ Date _____

Dog's age _____ Dog's sex _____ Dog's breed _____

My dog is scared of the following noises:

- electronic beeps (e.g. microwaves, ovens, dishwashers, phone sounds)
- whistles the low battery peep of a smoke alarm buzzers or alarms
- the squeak of sports shoes on the floor the blender the hair dryer
- cooking sounds nail guns drills power saws
- rain wind sirens if I drop something
- trucks (any) diesel trucks construction or landscaping equipment
- the beeping of a truck backing up the hiss of diesel brakes motorcycles
- the sound of any vehicle or landscape equipment revving
- fans white noise pink noise brown noise
- gunshots thunder fireworks other (specify below)

Other sounds _____

How old was your dog when you noticed a fear of any sound?

The sound/s I'd like to condition my dog to is/are:

Do you have a home sound system or high quality Bluetooth speaker? Please describe.

Have you tried to use recordings to condition your dog before? If so, what kind of sound system, and what was the result?

Anything else that might be pertinent for me to know?

You can send the completed form to my email below. Please include "Sound sensitive dog" in the subject. I'll reply by email or your contact method of choice to discuss whether your dog is a good candidate for sound conditioning. We may decide to discuss further via online conferencing.

Owner email address

Owner phone number (if preferred for contact)

